Bio

Charlie is a 20 year old student attending the University of Toronto, who spends 3 hours (or more!) commuting to school and back every day. He prefers not to have late classes, especially if they are followed by a morning class the next day. Charlie also attempts to fill up his schedule to avoid having only an hour of class on any given day, as he feels like it would be a waste, given the time it takes for him to commute to school.

Goals

- Spend less time scheduling his courses
- Get home earlier
- Spend less time at school

Frustrations

- Late night classes - tends to fall asleep
- Early morning classes - unable to wake up in time
- Manually checking course times to fit them into his schedule
